Our Future.

Shakespeare tells us "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;" and thousands there are who have verified the truthfulness of the adage. In the rise and progress of all new countries, it is a well-known fact that fortune has been made by small investments in real estate simply by the steady and gradual increase in the value of that description of property. It is true, the merchant, the mechanic, and the farmer, after years of toil, frugal habits, and close attention to business, not infrequently retire on a competency, to enjoy in their old age the fruits of their labors; but where we hear of one such case, we might point out scores who have become affluent in circumstances by a judicious investment of a small amount of capital in landed property. Were it necessary we could point to many in Victoria to illustrate this fact. But see for instance, what colossal fortunes have been made in this way in California. How many comparatively poor men eight or ten years back, who risked their eight hundred or a thousand dollars in suburban lots in San Francisco, which to-day could not be purchased for less than from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars each, have thereby become independent? Australia has also been fruitful of precisely similar results. There was a grand tidal period in the history of each of those countries, and those who took it at the flood, and secured an interest in the soil, were speed on to rapid fortune by the natural increase in its value. It may be asked by some, what has that to do with our future? British Columbia is neither an Australia nor a California, nor is it very probable that the marvelous increase that has taken place in the value of property in such cities as Melbourne or San Francisco will ever be witnessed in Victoria or elsewhere in this Province. We see no reason why we should not look for precisely similar results here as have characterized the history of those countries to which we have adverted. It is true we have not made the same rapid progress in population, commerce, manufactures, etc., that they did, and for very obvious reasons; but it does not follow that we never shall be similarly prosperous. Neither Australia nor California had, as we have had, a powerful rival to contend with at their very doors during their infant struggles for existence, jealous of their success and ever on the alert to impede their progress. But the day is not far distant when we shall be freed from all such outside influences prejudicial to our interests. What natural resources do either of those countries possess that have contributed to their wonderful success that British Columbia is destitute of? They have mines of gold and silver, and so have we; if they have inexhaustible coal beds, so have we; in respect of forests, the finest timber for commercial purposes, we can discount either of them; our fisheries are not only inexhaustible but produce a better article than either California or Australia can boast; in the area of lands for agricultural purposes we are probably very considerably behind, but as we have an abundance to supply the requirements of our own people, though they should multiply a thousand fold what they now number, that is all we care for. As a part of the Dominion of Canada, which to-day ranks as a second-rate maritime power, among the nations we may with the utmost confidence look forward to the day, not far hence, when a city shall spring into existence on the British Pacific the competitor if not the rival of either Melbourne or San Francisco. Our being confederated with Canada has inspired a feeling of confidence in the public mind, causing a visible increase in the value of real property, given an impetus to trade, and filled the hearts of those who were inclined to despondency with a well-grounded hope in the future. Under our improved system of Government the affairs of the country are in the way of being better attended to than ever before. Roads are being built, bridges repaired, the site for the graving dock is being surveyed, Victoria is to be supplied with an abundance of pure and wholesome water; besides all which we are to have numerous public works done by the Dominion Government so soon as we can get time to attend to them. Add to this the fact that in another year hence, or it may be sooner, the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway will be commenced, when our docks will be lined with shipping, our streets be crowded with men and merchandise, and an impetus be given to our trade and commerce such as British Columbia, even in her most palmy days, never before witnessed. We have said the result of all this will be the up-building of a great commercial city on this coast, and the question which is uppermost in many minds just now is, where will that great city be located? It will be just where the railway terminates on the seaboard, and that that terminus will be Esquimalt is just about as certain as anything well can be that is still wrapped in futurity. The Dominion Government has given its pledge to that effect, so that whether the road comes via Johnson's Strait or the Fraser Valley to Burrard Inlet, the road is bound to come to Esquimalt via Nanaimo, and there terminate. With our docks lined with shipping from all parts of the world—India, China, Japan, the Australia, and the numerous islands in the Pacific—discharging their cargoes of rich and varied goods, what can possibly prevent Victoria being one of the most populous and wealthy maritime cities on this continent? We believe there is a glorious future for Victoria, and now while real property is comparatively cheap, is the time for every man to secure himself a homestead—to take advantage of that tide which is flowing toward us, and that will no doubt lead many on to fortune.

SPECIAL TO THE DAILY STANDARD.

LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES.

EASTERN STATES.

ATLANTA, Sept. 17.—At the afternoon session of the Soldiers and Sailors' Convention,

Senator Henry Wilson of Massachusetts was present, and his appearance was greeted with the wildest enthusiasm. He addressed the Convention briefly, thanking them for the generous welcome, and expressing joy at meeting so many brave men. It was resolved to send greeting to President Grant, with the assurance they would give him an unanimous vote in November. A dispatch was read from ex-Confederate soldiers of Louisiana, stating that the war would never have been current but for the promises of assistance held out by the Union party from day to day.

Greenleaf, who is now staying to elect

Grant for this, they repudiate the selection of the Baltimore Convention, and honor Grant's magnanimity towards the soldiers of the Confederate States, and believe, in spite of lies and sneers, the coming campaign will be decided by the popular vote of the Southern people. After addresses by

Gen. Logan, Senator Wilson, Jas. A. Garfield and Stewart, the Convention adjourned till to-morrow.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—A call was issued today for a Convention of straight out De-

LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES.

EASTERN STATES.

ATLANTA, Sept. 17.—At the afternoon session of the Soldiers and Sailors' Convention,

meeting so many brave men. It was resolved

vote in November. A dispatch was read

from ex-Confederate soldiers of Louisiana,

stating that the war would never have been

current but for the promises of assistance held

out by the Union party from day to day.

Grant for this, they repudiate the selection of

lies and sneers, the coming campaign will be

to-morrow.
